TIGER HOUSE

(Senior Play)

CAST

To complete the year 1945 the Senior Class presented its customary play by reproducing "Tiger House," a novel mystery comedy, in three acts. The cast of characters gave each of the ten participants and the unknown tiger an unusual opportunity to characterize their individual parts.

Erma Lowrie played by Evelyn Penfield did a fine job as the heroine who had two ardent lovers, MacIntosh, portrayed by Richard Friedel and Arthur Hale played by Burton Buy. Erma was consoled and protected in a motherly manner by Helen Odegaard as Aunt Sophia. Mrs. Murdock, a Scotch lady was portrayed by Marjorie Kunz; all of her mysteriousness helped to keep the audience in suspense. Erma's former co-worker, Peggy Van Ess, appeared to be typical in part, being boy crazy and indicated by her actions a flapper type of today. Well done Florence Lorenzo. The Hindu, Yami, played by Lawrence Geils, gave by his performance and acting a creepy, evil atmosphere in his portrayal throughout the play. Clifford Miller, as Oswald Kerins, a dreamer type, yet enthusiastic, should be encouraged. One of the minor roles, Thompson, Fred Van Riper, a rather rough individual type, uneducated but with plenty of ego added to the mystery by his performance. The appearance of the Mystery Woman portrayed by Audrey Aspinwall in the third act brought to a climax the purpose of the play when the necklace was found by the Tiger, an animal trainer, who dressed the part of a tiger and held the audience in suspense until apprehended.

The play was directed by Miss Kelly.

SAUCE FOR THE GOSLINGS

(Senior Play)

Mr. Simpson, Gloria Hoffman, Frank Elhers, Gerry Reif, Bill Koestner, Evelyn Munroe, Grace Forster, Bill Maguire.

Mr. Taylor	Frank Elhers
Robert Taylor	Bill Koestner
James Ward	Bill Maguire
Mrs. Lee	Evelyn Munroe
Elizabeth Taylor	Gerry Rief
Mrs. Taylor	Gloria Hoffman
The Maid	Grace Foster
Director	Mr. Simpson

The Senior entry for the One-Act Play Contest this year is "Sauce for the Goslings." The story revolves about a cultured, middle-class family and takes place in the living-room of their home. The parents are annoyed by the slangy speech of their offspring, and try to correct their English by demonstrating how their boydenish speech sounds to others. The children are even more embarrassed since the lesson takes place on the evening a college friend is visiting the home. The antics of both sides of the family lead to many amusing situations.

GLORIA MUNDI

George Baeder, June Boswell, Miss More, Muriel Hees, Nancy Ellis, Lois Agor, Douglas Chadwick.

CAST

Miss Jebb, a nurse	Lois Agor
Robert Cartwell, a doctor	George Baeder
Virginia Blake, a new nurse	June Boswell

Persons Interested in the Asylum

Mrs. Fransworth	Nancy Ellis
Mr. Lloyd	Douglas Chadwick
Miss Dunn	Muriel Hees
Director	Miss More

The Junior play, "Gloria Mundi," which means Glory to the World, is a drama in one act. The scene is set in the reception room of an insane asylum. Virginia, a young, enthusiastic, new nurse who is eager at the thought of learning, comes for her first time to this asylum. She, gradually as the play moves on, begins to realize everything isn't as thrilling and wonderful there as she had once thought it to be. The insane seem to have a great influence upon the minds of others at the asylum and when the play ends even Virginia has been overcome by the influence of those who are mentally ill.

ANTIC SPRING

(Sophomore)

Mrs. Seymour, Elly Orzel, John Tiernan, Frances Doremus, Dick Friemuth, Barbara Terry, Eugene Herrman.

CAST

Elbert	Eugene Herrman
Ginger	Frances Doremus
Blossom	Barbara Terry
Robert	Dick Friemuth
Sam	John Tiernan
Gwendolyn	Elly Orzel
Director	Mrs. Seymour

"Antic Spring," by Robert Nail, the sophomore entry in the One-Act Play Contest, is a comedy about six teen-agers who decide to go on a picnic. There are plenty of laughs, caused by both characters and circumstances. Ants and rain finally break up what started to be a wonderful time.

One of the girls, Ginger (Frances Doremus), drives the car. Elbert (Eugene Herrman) is Ginger's younger brother. Blossom (Barbara Terry) tags after Elbert. Robert (Dick Friemuth) is a self-centered poet. Gwendolyn (Elly Orzel) and Sam (John Tiernan) quarrel half the time and make up the other half. Put them all together and the result is a hilarious "Antic Spring."

SUNDAY'S CHILD

(Freshman)

Faith Eley, Bobby Schweppe, Herbert Murk, Evelyn McGauley, Donald Kaplan, Mrs. Hickman.

CAST

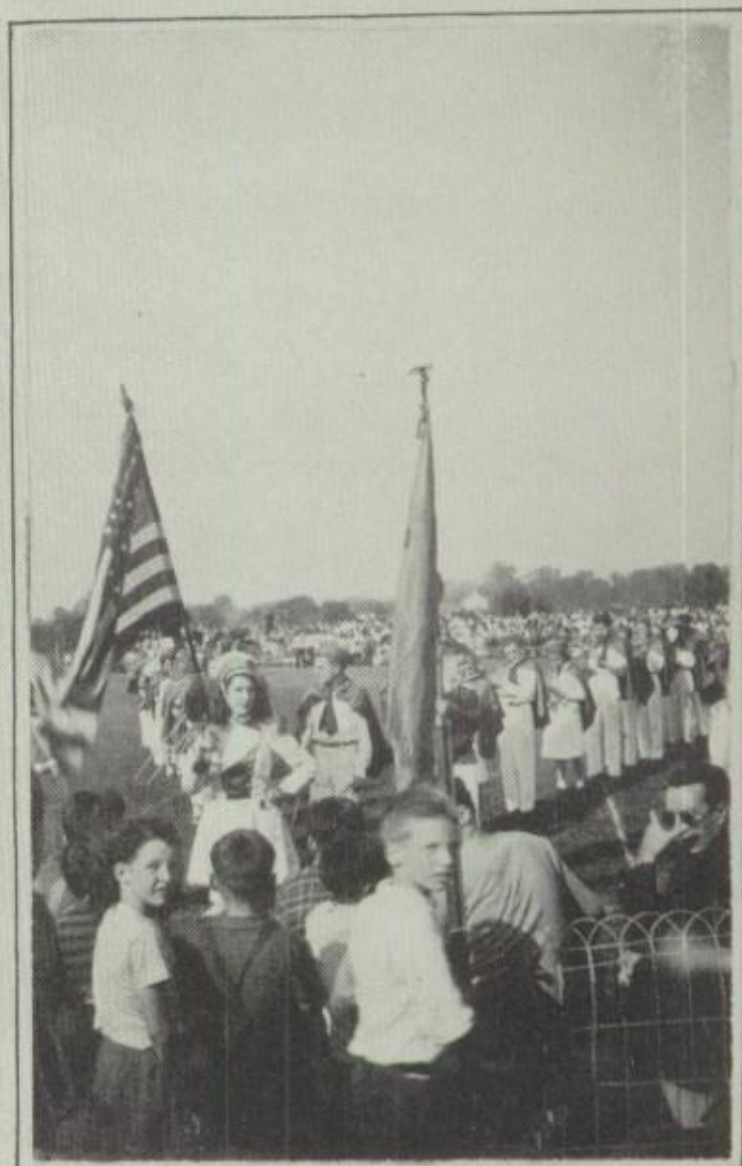

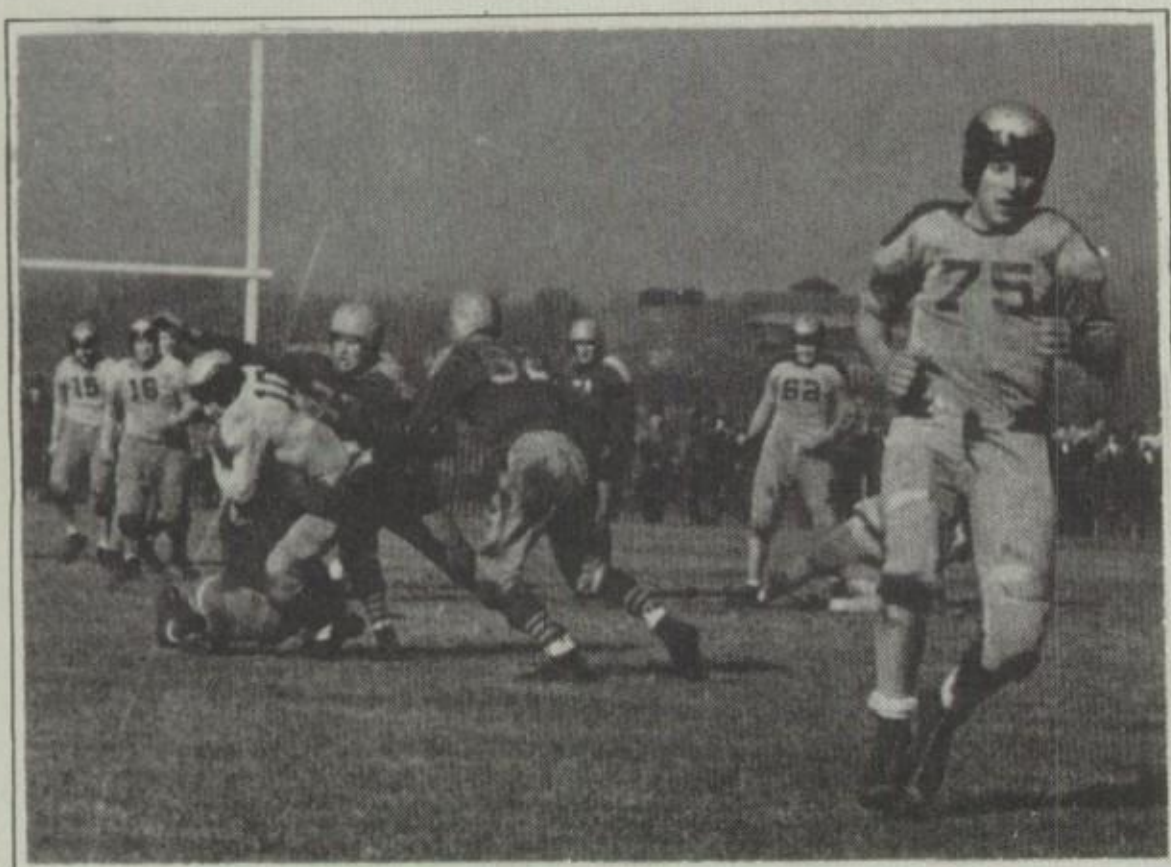

Betsy Wells	Mary Lou Springhorn
Windy	Herbert Murk
Reverend Paul Jones	Donald Kaplan
Ruth Wells	Faith Eley
Debbie	Evelyn McGauley
Zack	Bobby Schweppe
Director	Mrs. Hickman

"Sunday's Child" is a romantic comedy of life in a poor Methodist parsonage of 1916 in a small Oklahoma town.

Betsy, the Reverend's daughter, has learned that prayer is as natural as breathing and that God is simply her heavenly father. The play centers around her want of a pink dress for a party more than anything else in the world.

Reverend and Mrs. Wells form a fine background for this story. Zack is a typical, bashful admirer of Betsy. He cannot understand some of her actions but this does not alarm him.

The Indian, Windy, can probably be called the hero of "Sunday's Child." Because of his keen thinking, he makes it possible for Betsy to receive her cherished pink dress.

Class Will

We, the Class of 1945, being of sound mind and body, do leave and bequeath our worldly goods in this our last will and testament:

• Dick Friedel leaves Helen Ernst with a sigh—she'll manage.

Elva Lacchia leaves an empty place at the piano in all assembly programs.

Puddin' Schmidt leaves George Baeder stranded on the dance floor.

George Ottignon leaves his towering height to Tony Ribardo.

Harry Stagg bequeaths his favorite chair in Mr. Pollison's office to Jack Ivens.

Audrey Shropshire leaves Big Bill prey to the howling wolverines of B.H.S.

Lois Glock leaves brother Bob to find an equally capable dancing partner for those noontime sessions.

Florence Lorenzo leaves a goodly portion of her little girl freckles to any other girl who sighs—"Oh, they're so cute!!"

Ruth Fitzmaurice leaves Mrs. Sachtleben without an efficient secretary.

April Hinman leaves her modesty to Ruth Stricker. Practice what you preach, girls.

Helen Odegaard leaves with that same bouncing buoyancy she entered.

Evelyn Penfield leaves our band without a drum majorette. Problems will arise when anyone tries to fit in Penny's pert uniform. Do it justice, Miss X.

Class Will

Mickey Orsi leaves Patty Long with a box of bobbie pins—Come on Patty, if Mickey can do it so can you!!!

Paul Pieken leaves Mr. Cella with quite a dent in the basketball team.

Larry Geils and Warren Glander lay their cameras down long enough to pick up diplomas.

Bill Maguire leaves his pleasing manner to anyone who thinks he's as nice as Bill is.

Dot Snyder leaves the halls ringing with her cry of—"Hey, Farrissey!"

Clifford Miller leaves everyone in a fit of laughter—who else could get away with the things he's pulled?

Richie Grunn leaves his good sportsmanship and pleasant disposition to Skip Poole.

Evelyn Munroe leaves her garrulous enthusiasm to Alice Foss.

Larry Rasmussen leaves Mr. Hance's assignments to any Junior who can smile them off.

Carol Shaw leaves her surprised manner of getting A's on tests to Bernie Becker—who really would be surprised.

Arlene Boyajian leaves her faculty for being late to school to anyone who cares to run all the way to school each morning.

Maria Koch leaves her lovely voice resounding through the halls.

Harry Menzer leaves the school, student body and teachers—at last.

Phyliss Abernathy leaves her permanent place on the honor roll—empty.

We leave Mr. Poetz with a varied knowledge of chemistry—and a few other fields.

CLASS PROPHECY

As I hurried through the terminal toward my east-bound plane, I noticed a crowd had gathered; since curiosity had always been a weakness of mine, I drifted towards the excitement. There in the midst of everything was a nurse bending over someone prostrate on the floor; as the nurse turned to push the crowd away, I recognized her as Dorothy Rathgen. I learned from journalists, Anna Gleason and Rich Everett, and photographers, Larry Rasmussen and Larry Geils, that the person on the floor was Miss Audrey Aspinwall, actress in the latest revival of the season, "Romeo and Juliet." Miss Aspinwall had fainted from the strenuous trip after her last performance. The play had been backed by those two rich gentlemen farmers, Walter Schroeder and Burt Buy.

Pushed away by the crowd I met three of my old high school friends who were making the Navy a career—Lieutenants Dick Seaman, Harry Steimle, and Frank Ehlers.

Finally arriving at the plane, I handed my ticket to Bob McLeester, who was working for the John Broomhead Airline Company, and walked up the ramp to find the pilots to be John McCaffrey and Warren Glander. Stewardess Tillie Blum showed me to chair 10.

While waiting for the plane to take off, I glanced out the window and saw a billboard picture which had been drawn by Cliff Miller, known for his "Miller Girls." Colonel Ralph Skajaa of the Marines was gazing at the masterpiece; likewise were kindergarten-teacher Jackie Steron and Math-teacher Cookie Chomiak.

Looking to the left, I saw the Cafe Snafu, Bill Foody, proprietor, where Ken Koepplinger's name band was now playing, featuring Bob Collins on the trumpet and Don Dickie on the saxophone. Doris Earle was the featured dancer. Sociologist Elva Lacchia and research physicist Gardner Moyer were both speaking at the Forum House next door.

The passengers entering the plane were: Miss Joan Hotaling, the advertising executive, accompanied by her secretary, Miss Marilyn Nahhas, and Mr. Gordon Dann, a Chicago business associate, who was traveling to meet his wife, the former Doris Magee.

The Misses Doris Ludewig and Ruth Ruempler, fashion models, who entered with their photographer, Irene Dempster, were traveling to Chicago to meet Miss Emma Frapaul, buyer for multi-millionaire Bill Shine's exclusive shop.

As I fastened my safety belt, the plane soared into the sky, leaving behind sunny California.

On the other side of the aisle I saw that millionaire Fred Van Riper was speaking to his lawyer, Wilbur Rinaldi, whose court deeds had brought him much fame. Traveling with Mr. Rinaldi was his secretary, Miss Emily Smith.

Nurses Alice Scuitto, Florence Lorenzo, and Physiciatrist Eleanor Mesch were all on their way to Chicago General Hospital for a special case. Two U. S. Army Colonels—Charles Seward and Bill O'Brien were talking shop to each other.

Medical-secretary Lois Glock was on an assignment for her boss, Dr. Jay Brower. Zoologist Marion Leman was speaking to Admiral Harry Stagg of the Navy about high school days.

The trip took scarcely any time at all, and I soon found myself in Chicago. I was told that I could go off the plane for half an hour, since I was the only passenger going all the way to New York.

Leaving the plane, I walked towards the Basketeer, an ice cream parlor co-owned by Ed Daubenberg and Don Eggerston. I saw at one of the booths, secretaries Peggy Beattie, Gloria Hoffman, Ruth Loeschorn, Audrey Shropshire, and Helen Wegener.

Miss Inga Von Berg and Mr. Bill Maguire, commercial artists, were talking about an art exhibition which was being given by the great dramatic actress, Miss Evelyn Penfield, in her spacious Chicago home.

Radio star Arlene Boyajian of "Henry's Other Woman" was speaking to dress-designer Barbara Mowerson's secretary, Louise Marion. Beauticians Lorraine Snyder, Dotty Bowens, and Gloria Damurjian entered the ice-cream parlor.

I went over to the telephone, dialed the operator, and gave her the number of Grunn, Inc. Her voice sounded like that of Kay Grimaldi, who always said she wanted to be a telephone operator. Richard Grunn's secretary, Margaret Farrissey, said that Mr. Grunn was planning to go to China for more reconstruction work, and at the present time was speaking to his advertising director, Grace Forster, and his personnel director, Eleanor Bagemihl.

Not having any more time to wait I left the parlor as Navy wives Marion Meyer, Rita Morey, and Jerry Bartlum entered together. On my way to the airport, I passed a school playground where gym-teachers Mary Normile and Ruth FitzMaurice had a class. Physical Education Director of the school, Bob Becker, was just coming out onto the field. Artist George Mohr was painting the entire scene. Interior Decorator Joan McCracken had a little shop next to the airport where Mickey Orsi acted as her receptionist. Certified Public Accountant Ed Boultan was going over the books for secretary Jean Maitland.

Engineers Alex Schwartzkopf and Bill Koestner were supervising the erection of a new building for the airport, assisted by draftsman Peggy Rasmussen.

Reporters Elfrieda Struckman and Evelyn Munroe were at the airport as I hurried onto the plane behind Miss Helen Odegard, the sociologist, who was followed by her boss' secretary, Eileen Von Hagen.

Medical-assistants Dot Oberglock and Dot Warner were saying goodbye to Barbara Hancock who was going on her vacation. George Ottignon, baseball sports writer, entered followed by his assistant, Harry Menzer.

Settled in my seat again, I noticed that Miss Margie Kunz, the concert pianist, sat next to me. Outside dietitian Edna Griess was saying goodbye to her friend, Marjorie Herrick, fabric designer.

Before the plane took off I noticed a poster advertising children's books sketched by artist Jean Gunder, while house-wife Elsie Celandier was speaking to dental-assistant Jane Armagost. French-interpreter Yvonne Mase, Spanish-translator Mitzi Eaton, and Spanish-stenographer Louise Voigtlander went into the Language House.

Passengers hurrying on were laboratory-technicians Carol Shaw and Margie Bullwinkel, followed by former Navy nurse Gerry Rief. The plane took off with pilot Bill Kramer and co-pilot Barbara Simpson at the controls.

Traveler Jimmy Bloomer turned on the radio and we heard the voice of Betty Muendell, now working for station WNXR. Chemist Carl Schubert spoke for fifteen minutes concerning his new experiment. An hour of music with Fred Waring pleased us all; Arlene Walker was now one of the featured vocalists. A quiz program followed having a match between secretaries Dot Snyder, Amy Albina, Phyllis Abernathy, and Ruth Peterman of the D. Russ Corporation and nurses Puddy Schmidt, Edith Pfaff, Maria Kock, and Arlene Mueller of St. Luke's Hospital.

Looking through a magazine I saw a photograph of a window of a store which had been decorated by April Hinman and Barbara Grattage.

I overheard dietitian Marion Reynolds telling someone that she was traveling to New York to Marry Dr. ————— and then I couldn't hear any more. How disappointing!
